

"The Press, the rostrum, and the newspaper;" and he ought to have added—the pulpit, the altar, and the confessional. To the freest and fullest expression of his opinions he has a perfect right, and nobody has ever called that right in question. But since he appeals to the bar of general public opinion, he is responsible for his utterances before that tribunal, and by its verdict his cause must stand or fall. More serious accusations against the most cherished institutions of this country he could not have made; and their very gravity compels the public to demand evidence for their substantiation. What are Dr. VAUGHAN's proofs?

Nothing less would meet the logical necessities of the case than absolute demonstration that children educated in the Public schools of this colony are less moral, religious, and God-fearing than children educated in the Roman Catholic schools; and that the difference in the course of instruction is the cause of the difference of character. Is there any such difference of character? The Catholic Bishops say there is, but their assertions are worth no more than the actual proof they can submit. Hitherto they have given no proof whatever, and we must look for it elsewhere. Shall we look for it in our public streets? Do boys attending Roman Catholic schools break fewer windows, stone fewer cats and dogs, and stray goats, pay more civility to passers-by, use purer language, tell fewer lies, quarrel and fight less, and behave better generally than boys attending Public schools? Do girls who receive the Catholic training exhibit a higher type of modesty, virtue, and godliness than other girls? The author of Christianity himself said "by their fruits ye shall know them," and till Dr. VAUGHAN can "gather grapes from thorns and tige from thistles" he must bow to that dictum of his Master. As we have no public "censor morum" in the colony, everyone must decide this question by the results of his own observation, and so far there has not been even an attempt to substantiate the charge. Similarly, if an appeal be made to the factories and workshops of the country, to the employers of labour generally, to our charitable institutions, and finally, to our police gaols and prisons no such evidence of a difference in character as Dr. VAUGHAN assumes can be produced; or, if it can, it is not on the side for which he claims it; for it cannot be said that the Church of Rome contributes, in proportion to numbers, fewer inmates of our prisons, asylums, and charitable institutions generally than the other Churches of this colony.

Failing to find the evidence he ought to produce in New South Wales, he refers us to the United States for proof of the results of Public school education there, and although there are considerable differences between our system and that of the great Republic, we have no objection to accompany him in his quest, simply claiming the right to cross-examine his witnesses, and to confront them with testimony from unimpeachable sources. And, by the way, the cause of infallibility must be getting consciously weak when it needs supporting by such worldly wisdom as that of the Boston Pilot, the New York Evening Post, and other secular organs of opinion. But let us take the charges themselves. "Five-sixths of the people of the United States do not attend any place of worship!" This is quoted from the evidence of Cardinal CULLEN, given before the Royal Commission on Irish Education as far back as the 22nd February, 1869—rather a long way to go for evidence of such an allegation, especially when the quotation is made without reference to the authority from which it is taken. The chain of evidence is this: Dr. VAUGHAN says that Cardinal CULLEN said that the Bishop of TENNESSEE said that Dr. CHEEVER had said that "five-sixths of the people of the United States do not attend any place of worship." What would such evidence be worth in a court of law. What are the facts? According to the census of 1870, the Protestant churches of the United States had accommodation for 10,679,454 persons, and their church property was valued at $9,985,666 dollars, or about twelve millions sterling. Therefore the Protestants could accommodate every Sunday 51 per cent. of the entire population of the United States at the date of the latest reliable returns, and the Roman Catholics only 5 per cent.; but between them they had accommodation for considerably more than half the whole population of the Union, which is certainly a large a number as can ever attend church at any one time. To show the significance of this fact, we will compare it with similar returns for New South Wales. For the year 1878 the accommodation in Protestant churches in the colony was for 162,943 persons, or 234 per cent. of the population; and in Roman Catholic churches, 36,030 persons, or 6 per cent. of the population. Altogether we have in this colony church accommodation for less than one-third of our people, or almost exactly half the proportionate accommodation provided by the people of the United States. Does it become us to reproach the Republic for its irreligion in the face of a fact like that? Where else has such ample provision been made for the religious wants of the people, and entirely by the voluntary effort growing out of personal religious conviction unsupported by State pay and untrammeled by State control? Dr. VAUGHAN is in the habit of stimulating the zeal of the faithful by describing that building which is to supersede the structure in which he is delivering his lectures, as a monument of Catholic piety and devotion in this hemisphere for all time. Here is evidence that the free Church of the United States have provided twice as well for the religious wants of the whole population as all the Churches of New South Wales have provided for our people, although aided by grants of public land and public money ever since the foundation of the colony. His accusations of lawlessness and crime are equally groundless, as we propose to prove in a subsequent article.

At a meeting of the Executive, yesterday, it was finally decided that in the matter of the condemned criminals, SCOTT and ROOAN, the law should take its course. The fate of these unhappy men therefore now rests with the GOVERNOR. It was stated by the PARNELL in the Assembly last evening, that the Executive Council saw no reason to disturb the sentence in regard to any of the Wantabadgery prisoners, but that the GOVERNOR saw fit to exercise his prerogative of mercy in reference to the two younger criminals. The announcement of the decision of the Executive will not have been received with surprise, nor do we imagine that it will be generally disapproved. During the last few days a number of benevolent persons have been exerting themselves to secure for the two condemned criminals the clemency which was shown towards their confederates; but the chief ground on which the appeal for mercy has been urged is that since the sentence of death has been commuted in reference to the other two, it should be commuted in reference to the two. Mr. WILLIAMS and BENNETT, however, were reprimanded on account of their youth, and because there was reason to believe that they had been led astray by their older companions. To a large section of the public these considerations did not seem to have much force, but they had weight with the GOVERNOR. No more reasons for mercy have been urged. SCOTT and ROOAN's case, nor does it appear that any new facts have been brought to light to warrant a mitigation of punishment. Under these circumstances it is difficult to see how the Executive could have come to any other conclusion than the one which was reached yesterday. It is sad to think that two young men, one of them at least possessing exceptional gifts, should be doomed to so terrible a fate; but it is easier to think of the crime of which these men were convicted, and of the sorrow which their crime has caused. How to prevent the spread of crime is the question with which the Executive have to deal. The end of punishment is the protection of society, and although the certainty of punishment may, ordinarily, be a more powerful deterrent than its severity, there are occasions on which leniency to criminals is the encouragement of criminality. On such occasions the showing of mercy to culprits masons the showing of no mercy to those who look to the law as their only protector. The highest authority in the land should be merciful, but it should also be just. If any other conclusion had been arrived at by the Executive than the one which is now announced, there would have been a profound conviction that, although mercy had been exercised, justice had been sacrificed. Whatever may be said of the decision in the cases of BURNETT and WILLIAMS, the Executive are to be commended for not yielding to outside pressure in the present instance.

Prince BISMARCK has spoken out with characteristic boldness and decision, and warned Russia to the peace and form an alliance with France. If that warning has the desired effect, the German Chancellor will have rendered the greatest service to Europe, especially to France. JOHN LAMONT, writing in the spring of 1878, pointed out how Russia assisted Germany in 1870 by keeping Europe quiet while France was being crushed, and how in return Germany countenanced the aggression of Russia in the East.

The memorable telegram sent by the Emperor of Germany to his nephew of Russia on the capitulation of Paris was taken as a proof that the alliance of the two nations was to be lasting; and from this alliance M. LAMONT argued in 1870 that keeping Europe quiet while France was being crushed, and how in return Germany countenanced the aggression of Russia in the East.

Yesterday a deputation consisting of Mr. Coonan, Mr. Bladen, Mr. Dalton, and other gentlemen, waited on the Minister for Works, for the purpose of presenting a largely signed memorial urging the desirability of connecting Portsea with Ormiston by railway, when the railway shall be extended between Ormiston and the Darling. The deputation pointed out the great claims that the district had in the extent and variety of its resources, and the sea-borne which prevail over the higher parts of the city between dusk and 10 o'clock has proved refreshing to persons who visited those localities. Rain is wanted in the suburbs, where gardens are numerous, and yesterday morning early the sky was overcast although no rain fell. Bright, clear skies are so famous for their dimensions and how little that it is probable many will make this cheap trip to visit her, and with thus benefit deserving charities. It is worthy of notice that when she was at London she was constantly thronged during visiting days; that in one day over 3000 people inspected her; and that the receipts from these visits gave £800 to be distributed in charity.

ARRIVAL OF THE MAIL,
VIA SAN FRANCISCO.

The R. M. S. Australia arrived in Port Jackson at noon yesterday, bringing London papers to the 5th December, telegraphic news to the 21st December, and San Francisco journals to December 22.

ENGLISH AND FOREIGN AFFAIRS.
(FROM OUR LONDON CORRESPONDENT.)

LONDON, Dec. 5.

Mr. Gladstone's selectioneering tour in Scotland has been the most important event in the home news of the past fortnight. The extraordinary ability of this great statesman has never received such an illustration as in these Scotch speeches. Though close on seventy years of age, he has for more than a week past spoken almost daily, to the extent of many columns. To those newspaper people who are obliged to read every word that Mr. Gladstone says, it is appalling to take up the Times, morning after morning, and carefully to peruse the four toxic columns of the right hon. gentleman's utterances. Even his celebrated Lancashire tour, of some dozen years ago, produced no such results as these present pregiations, either as to quantity or to quality. The Liberals, too, point with pardonable pride to the remarkable enthusiasm which Mr. Gladstone has created. A Nelson or a Wellington, not even a royal prince could have evoked such a significant reception as he has received the ex-Premier wherever he went. At every station where his train has stopped, he was presented with addresses of congratulation, or parcels of goods of native manufacture. At one place it was a "mambo," at another a rug, at a third a huge bundle of table linen, at a fourth some homspun cloth, sufficient to make a suit of clothes. All these incidents have elicited the inevitable speech. The audience, at some of his meetings in Midlothian have numbered as many as two thousand, in one instance, twenty thousand persons, and owing to the popularity of Liberalism, he has never met with the slightest manifestation of opposition. His discourses may be dealt with under three heads—those which deal with the foreign policy of the Government, those which criticised their home and financial policy, and those which touched upon the leading items of the future Liberal programme. Through his speeches upon all these subjects were received with unabated enthusiasm, the true test of their excellence is not to be measured by the approval of audiences which were in thorough sympathy with the speaker. The right hon. gentleman's utterances must be judged by what everybody knows him to be. Mr. Rea to George Francis Tait, but on the odd position in which the Government have been placed through the obstinacy of one of the defendants. Mr. Gladstone's admirers. Upon the leading subject of foreign policy there can be no doubt that Mr. Gladstone's criticisms proved as great a failure in Midlothian as his attacks in the House of Commons. Upon this theme the right hon. gentleman once more confirmed the very prevalent opinion that the mind of the country is not with him in his views upon what is known as the Turkish question. The weakness of his case was fully brought home when he propounded his remedies for the Eastern trouble. I cannot go into details, but his chief points were these that he would have coerced the Turk in conjunction with the other Powers, and he blames the Government for failing to accept the Berlin memorandum, and for discouraging the aspirations of the Sultan at Newcastle, Manchester, and London, respecting the arrest of David, Daly, and Killen. He has been of the most trumpery character. Nobody of any influence took part in them, and though 40,000 persons were said to be present at the Hyde Park demonstration, the actual "demonstrators" were under 5000. Mr. Shaw, the leader of the Irish Parliamentary party, has become more active in his denunciations of the outcry which Mr. Parnell has raised. He is a little unfortunate for Mr. Parnell's agitation that the tenants of his house demands from other landlords in the name of the suffering people. The Irish question just now presents some remarkable curiosities. For instance, the clamour of Irish sedition is accompanied by demands for English money to help the Irish through the winter. Again, the Irish suppose that they can make Ireland a separate kingdom, and yet swan by an Irish vote the English parliamentary and municipal constituencies. Instead of tenants who have had hard times giving up the land, they recognize "the good old rule, the simple plan," stick to the land and threaten to murder the landlord who demands his rent. I am not joking when I say that these Irish questions are full of Hubris.

The New York Herald, if not the organ, at least the friend of the Irish party in America, thus refers to Mr. Parnell's visit to America and his supposed mission—If Mr. Parnell could carry out his crazy programme, much cabin could be a numerous ten years hence in Ireland as in 1841. What we say, therefore, to the Irish of the United States is not to give one cent for Mr. Parnell and his crew, but millions to help emigration to this country. There is room for all who come—cheap, fertile lands; every Irish family may easily, with industry and economy, own its own acres. Here is work at good wages—no landlords, no bailiffs; but let no man have no Fenian nonsense—no proposition to free Ireland by processes 3000 miles off. That does no good—it only fills adventures and dangerous pockets.

The Queen has returned from Scotland, and been afflicted with a very severe cold. It must have been bad, for her Majesty could not even take her daily walk, and had to send for Dr. Jenner. She is now on the mend, and is resuming her usual activity.

A very good paper was read at the first meeting of the session of the Colonial Institute, by Mr. Stephen Bourne. The subject was "emigration, as a necessity to the mother-country." The discussion, however, like most at these meetings, was very poor, and had not been for the presence and the closing address of the Right Hon. W. E. Forster, the opening meeting would have been a very lame business.

The chief item of foreign news has been the attempt to blow up the Czar. An impression was current in the first instance that it was simply a "police plot," got up by the ruling class to maintain the system of terror which set in after the last Nihilist attempt on the life of the Czar.

There seemed a possibility that that system would be relaxed, for there had been a talk of some intended constitutional reforms, which are to be announced on the Czar's birthday. To-day, however, the notion prevails that it was a piece of treason, and it is not surprising that the same people who object to seeing Russia at Constantinople, are also opposed to any step which would assist her creature nationalities to reach the same place. The recent experience of Romania shows that positions of international strategic importance ought not to be entrusted to weak Powers, or to small nationalities, and it is for that reason we have such a popular feeling in this country in favour of Constantine being transferred to Austria, whenever the period of transference arrives. The other of Mr. Gladstone's points, as to the coercion of Turkey by "all the Powers," simply backs the question. What Turkey has been coerced without the use of gunpowder? Were the Powers prepared to resort to such extreme methods of intervention? Both those questions may, I think, be safely answered in the negative. Bismarck would not have moved a single Pomeranian in the interest of Turkey, and events have shown that he was equally unprepared to lift a finger against another Power undertaking the work of coercion on its own account, and in its own interest. In the early days of the recent development of this Turkish question, when the Berlin memorandum was launched, it was to the interest of Germany that Russia should take the lead in the Eastern settlement. The very instrument which Mr. Gladstone must approve—the Berlin memorandum—was an instant attempt on the part of the new-born triple alliance to shape the destinies of Europe. Even so far as the Czar's accession to the throne of Russia is concerned, he has shown no interest in the political world, and was the first to denounce that memorandum. No; despite the enthusiasm which Mr. Gladstone's speech has aroused, his views upon the Eastern question show how little the people of Russia will trust him in questions of foreign policy.

Mr. Gladstone was most at home, and decidedly more successful in his criticism of the domestic policy of the Government. His observations on finance, last Saturday, were a masterpiece of simple and inextinguishable exposition, and most damaging to the Government in another campaign. The Turkish question remains in much the same condition as when I last left Baker Pasha on the point of starting. The country seems to be going into a condition of anarchy, even more rapidly than Turkey. It is not many days since a man was found at one of the Russian railway stations with a carpet bag full of nitroglycerine, and though the Socialists are comparatively little heard of—one of them attempted to get into the Empress's house at Cannes the other day—they are still actively at work.
